

Reflecting upon lessons of ‘what works’: Developing student engagement and partnerships

Dr Kate Strudwick

Dean of LALT

Lincoln Academy of Learning and Teaching, University of Lincoln

Abstract

This session will present some of the lessons learnt from student engagement initiatives within and outside of the curriculum. By reflecting upon established practice from over a decade, dialogue and conversations can be developed on what works, why such schemes were successful and explore what we can learn from each other. When responding to current challenges in HE there are many benefits to sharing experiences of good practice. These can allow for the development of partnerships and collaborative projects between students and academics and have the potential for developments in a blended learning environment.

Video Links: Pre-video <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3SxqW06xM6k>

Live discussion <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6nrfo4JCXaU>